

Think Tactically When Selecting A Seat

Everyone dines out from time to time. It could be a five star restaurant or a fast food work-a-raunt. Sometimes we get to pick our seating area, other times we cannot. Whenever given the opportunity to choose where to sit in a restaurant, use the following two tips when taking your decision.

Be aware that if some sort of crime is going to be committed, it is probably going to be somewhere near the entrance and will probably center around where the money is kept. It is wise to sit in such a way as to have a good view of the front entrance and away from where most monetary transactions take place.

Another point to consider is a secondary exit from the building, such as a back door or side door. If things begin to go bad, you have an avenue of getting away from the danger. If there are no alternate exits available, look for a large window to smash out. This may sound extreme, but it's better to have a plan and not need one, than to need a plan and not have one.

Even if your table selection is made by the maî-tre d you still have a choice where to sit at the table. Make sure you have an view of the front entrance. This way you can observe anything about to happen.

There are numerous other options to consider, these are the basics. → Stay Safe!!
